THE NCREASE OF CRIME.

In all pr ts of our country, North and South, Eas and West, there is a fearful recklessne prevailing in respect to the commission of heinous offences against law and order. Great criminals are rapidly multiplying. Horrible murders, daring burglaries, theft, arson, and robbery seer to be the order of the day; indeed, crim in every form stalks abroad, and would seem to be epidemic. Human life is no longer sacred. Men are murdered for revenge, but more frequently for a few dollars. Husbands are murdering their wives, and wives their husbands, that they may gratify the lowest and most debase human passions. The condition of things in this respect is becoming fear fully alarming, and there is no telling whereunto this will lead, unless iramediate efforts are made to put a stop to these things by the chosen ministers of law Society has a remedy for all this in the stringent enforcement of law. Moral training, the suppression of intemperance and the inculcation of correct principles respecting the mission and object of human government may do much; but the rigid enforcement of all the laws and the certain infliction of all the penalties which the law prescribes will do more. It is not the doer from the perpetration of contem plated crime. The way the law has been administered—or perhaps we should say not administered at all—has had the effect to lead every one who, for selfish or mercenary ends, determines to commit a crime it almost with impunity, under the belief that he will very probably escape. Let it once be understood that there is no escape, that the utmost penalty of the law will surely be visited upon the wrong-doer, and a wholesome restraint will be imposed, the salutary influence of which will soon be manifest.

There is a mawkish sentiment in the community that sympathizes with and in-dulges a foolish pity for the criminal be-cause he suffers. While it is true that we should not entertain the spirit of revenge against the criminal—that we should bar bor no malice nor inflict any unmerited administration of law, should be as stern as justice, and insexibly determined to meto out equal and exact justice to all the violators of law. It is the general laxity in this particular which is the prime cause of the difficulty, and until we come back to the good old way which our fathers pursued, and to that commended by God himself, the evil complained of will increase. If we will sow to the wind we shall reap the whirlwind." If we look lightly upon great crimes, and allow criminals to escape the just penalties of the law, we may expect to reap a fruitful harvest in return for our apathy and neglect. Away, thee, with all this ill-ti ned sympathy for the criminal, and let the I .w have its just sway, and the evil complained of will soon be largely

Ma. Parsinser: His Majesty, the Estaperor of Brazil, my august sovereign, has been pleased to intrust me with a new mission in South America, and in consequence of this change in my diplomatic career I have the honor to deliver into your hands the Imperial letter which puts an end to my mission in the United States.

I deeply regret to leave this country, where I had the good fortune of enjoying your benevolence, the esteem and consideration of your Government, and the sympathies of the American people. My only thought during my mission has been to bind more closely together and to render more intimate the existing relations between the United States and Brazil. I am persanded that inasmuch as it has been in my power, I have met the hopes of my sovereign, as well as the expressions you honored me with at the reception of my credentials.

My country is advancing rapidly on the way of progress and civilization, as evinced by the most important and recent acts of its policy. My successor will have the opportunity of making his mission under such happy auspices.

Please, Mr. President, to accept the asternations have been received here from Madrid that Lorgow, Taburance in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been created where the country, ones from Madrid that recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been recent disturbances in Catalomia and other parts of Spain, have been created where constantly being made by the color. such happy auspices.

Please, Mr. President, to accept the assurances of all my respect and thanks, and of my earnest and heartfelt wishes for the prosperity and greatness of the United States of North America.

To which the President replied as fol-

MR. DE AZAMBOJA: Your official inter ms. De Alamboa: Cour omean inter-course with this Government has been in all respects courteous, just, and honorable. I regret, therefore, that it is so soon to be brought to an end. I trust that you will be successful and happy in the new and interesting field in which you are hence-forth to be employed.

interesting field in which you are henceforth to be employed.

Your Government will be advised, on a proper occasion, of the sentiments which I have thus expressed.

In the meantime you are at liberty to communicate to the Emperor of Brazil my sincere congratulations upon the important changes of domestic policy which he has inaugurated. It has always been spparent that civilization could not be succasefully extended or perfected throughout South America so long as the Amazon and its arms were bound with political fetters; nor could the foundations of industry, art, and free government be completely extablished while stavery was maintained in the Brazilian Empire. By now giving free play to the material and moral forces in Brazil the Emperor has become not only eminent among statesmen but prominent among the benefactors of mankind.

The present condition of the American States is hopeful. Arbitrary forms of government have generally disappeared from the continent, and the nations are organized under free, or, at least, liberal constitutions. Colonial restraints upon commerce have passed away altogether or been essentially anodified. Slavery henceforth retires from this continent back to the Old World, whence in an unbappy nour, it came. Certainly our American States have in these respects "departed from evil," and begun "to do good." If now they can learn that in all cases reason is a better and more effective agent for organizing and regulating political societies than military force, they may be soon expected to seek peace and pursue it.
